

FEEL THE EVIDENCES OF CONFLICT OF REBELLED

by Villa to give the alarm in the event of the federalists returning to the battle. As we returned to Mesa, O. C. C. and a party came back from a trip east by the mesa road, instead of the road down the railroad track. They said they had seen a few dead on the mesa, but that most of them were buried or being buried. The rebels had evidently taken care of all victims of the battle, in short order. Unless one knew that a battle had been fought, the battlefield could have been crossed this afternoon and returned without discovering its real character.

The rebels themselves quit the field as soon as they had satisfied themselves that the federalists had been driven back. They came to Juarez this morning, all of them except their outposts. We passed them as we went out thousands of them. They were all happy, shouting "Viva Villa" and occasionally "Viva Madero." One overhauled a rebel's rifle twice from the train, directly over our ear. This was the only firing we saw or heard during our trip. The battle raged on back to El Paso again.

Just as we rode out of Juarez, about 10:30 Wednesday morning, with Juan N. Medina had furnished us with a pass that we were not required to show on the entire trip. We met the train coming in. Two locomotives were pulling it and in the center there was another locomotive. The train was made up of box cars, coaches, flat cars, tank cars and coal cars. Rebels were inside, outside and everywhere. The flat cars were piled high with them. The rebels were shouting and yelling and waving their hats.

Just as we reached the place where the old concentration camp formerly stood, we began to meet rebel cavalry and artillery coming into Juarez, and this continued almost all the way to Bache. One band would scarcely get past before another band would show up. All the men looked like intelligent, some of them were well clothed, and everybody was happy. A captain and other officers rode at the head of each of the victorious commands and each troop also carried the Mexican tricolor. They showed splendid military formation for raw men. Some of them carried extra hats, some carried a federal cap as a souvenir and several officers wore capes from federal officers' uniforms.

Some of them were eating from cans, which they carried in their hands. Some were munching tortillas, several were anxious to get a cigar or a cigar.

Fifteen pieces of artillery, all of it new and apparently in perfect shape, passed us, coming in as we went out. Altogether, we must have passed between 2000 and 4000 men in the victorious line of march headed for Juarez. Some rode astraddle one horse, some poor, sore backed animals. Several pieces along the road we saw animals that had been abandoned because of the lack of food. In several instances a rebel, on horseback, was carrying a dead animal. One of the mount of some comrade who had given up his life in battle.

Several women were in the cavalry. One rode astraddle with one of the commands, her hair hanging down her back in a braid. One rode in a farm wagon with a baby in it, a nursing baby at her breast. Two spring wagons, bearing the names of Mexican firms, evidently confiscated in the interior of Mexico, were in the line of march, carrying baggage. One wagon carried a freshly killed steer, not yet skinned.

Many young kids rode with the different commands. The men were all well behaved, none of them seemed to have been drinking, and on the whole, they appeared extremely well disciplined.

shall be considered as noncombatants. "In case the favor is granted, the wounded after their recovery shall not be detained by the authorities of your country as prisoners. Whatever may be the result of this appeal, I beg to assure you of my gratitude and respect."

HUEBERTA SAYS HIS ARMY IS VICTORIOUS

Paris, France, Nov. 26.—President Huerta has sent the following cablegram from Mexico City to the Matin: "The situation of the country from an economical and military point of view has improved, because the government of the republic possesses the funds necessary to supply its needs and, moreover, because the national army came out victorious in the recent serious engagements fought against the rebels of the north."

"So far as our international relations are concerned, we are in complete harmony with all the powers except with the government of the United States, but the republic looks to the latter to do complete justice to the national cause."

"To sum up, the situation is notably improved. The two chambers and the two other departments of the government are carrying out their functions in all regularity."

REBELS ABANDON PLANS TO REINFORCE PARLEY WITH U. S. Magdalena, Son. Mex., Nov. 26.—News that Francisco Escudero, foreign minister in Carranza's cabinet, had left Juarez to join other members of the cabinet here, was taken as the final ending of the negotiations with the United States through William Bayard Rustin. It was reported that Escudero had remained at the international boundary to receive any further proposals the Washington government might make. Preparations for the "Constitutionalist" campaign along the west coast have begun.

At Culiacan, Nov. 26.—Reports that American consul Algor, at Mazatlan, and governor Rivera, of Sinaloa, had been exchanging notes regarding the shutting off of the water supply at Mazatlan, which is now invested by rebel troops. The governor refused to shut off the water supply because this would interfere with the campaign against the federalist forces. He expressed regret that Americans and other noncombatants had suffered from what he declared was a necessary act on the part of the federalists.

GERARD DISCUSSES MEXICO WITH GERMAN MINISTER

Berlin, Germany, Nov. 26.—James W. Gerard, United States ambassador to Germany, called today on Gottlieb Von Helldorf, German foreign minister, and discussed the Mexican situation. It was understood that the ambassador received a cable communication from Washington reaffirming the attitude of the United States in regard to the elimination of Huerta and the non-recognition of the new Mexican congress.

Advice To the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax.

DON'T FORCE MATTERS. Dear Miss Fairfax: If a girl 18 and am going out quite often with a man eight years my senior.

He has never said anything to me of his intentions, whether he is serious or not, but I sometimes talk about it, he tells me he does not intend to marry for about five or six years.

I greatly admire him, and I am sure it is likewise with him, but do you think I am wasting my time going with him and neglecting other opportunities? Half disappointed.

It is not your privilege to force a declaration from him. On the other hand, if you think he is monopolizing your time needlessly, it is your privilege to refuse to see so much of him.

Give him to understand without saying so that it makes no difference to you what his marrying intentions may be.

EVERYBODY'S COOK BOOK

TO PICKLE A HUSBAND BY DOROTHY DIX

A DISH much in favor in many households is pickled husband, which may be made at any meal, although the majority of wives seem to relish it as a titbit late at night, just before going to sleep.

Almost any kind of a husband may be pickled by a wife who is a real industrious trouble hunter and conscientious about doing her full duty about bossing her family and looking carefully after its ways.

The best husbands to pickle, however, are the good natured, easy going sort (genus rounder), although there is a small, meek variety (genus henpecked) that have a very fine flavor also, and are much easier to pickle.

To prepare this delicious condiment to married life first select your husband. Pay especial attention to this, for some husbands can't be pickled at all, and when you try to pickle them they run all over the place and make an awful mess. Therefore be very careful on this point, for to the great majority of women the domestic menu would be flat and tasteless except for the unflinching supply of pickled husband they always keep in the cupboard.

Select then, if it be possible, a nice, fat juicy, thin-skinned husband who is fond of gravity and has many friends. If he thinks he knows how to play poker so much the better. Smell his breath, and if it has an odor that resembles an old pipe and a glass of stale beer you may be sure that you have secured a luscious specimen for pickling.

If you cannot get this kind of a husband, almost any sort of a busy, hard working husband of the species American Boobies will do, but pains must be taken to avoid husbands with square jaws and pale blue eyes, especially if these features are accompanied by red hair, as this species defies almost heartless efforts of any wife to pickle them.

Having secured your husband, take him and begin the pickling process by first salting him down in brine, in order to melt down any backbone he may happen to have, and to make him into a perfect mass of acquiescence. It has been proved by millions of housewives, who have tried it, that nothing so completely takes the stamina and fight out of a man as tears.

So begin with the process of disintegration on him morning, noon and night. Weep over him because you can't have this, and you can't have that. Weep when the soup is salty; weep when your new dress doesn't fit; weep when he comes home 10 minutes late to dinner; weep when his mother comes to see you; weep when he won't take you to the theater; burst into perfect floods of tears if he dares to criticize anything you do or say, or that your mother does or says. Keep the water spout going continuously until the whole atmosphere of your home is so damp and foggy and sticky that it will give anybody rheumatism of the heart and scalds of the disposition.

Persist in the salt water treatment until you perceive that your husband is getting web-footed, so that he is afraid to make a move lest he should inadvertently step on some of your precious little feelings, and so precipitate another downpour. You can also perceive when he is becoming sufficiently gullible to pick to by sticking the pitchfork into him now and then. If he answers back he needs another barrel of tears poured over him, but if he returns no back talk he is in fit condition to proceed with the further processes of pickling.

Then prick him all over with a sharp tongue. Make the gashes as deep as you can by saying all the things that will cut him to the quick to hear. Some women hold that the best way to do this is by taunting a man with his failures, and telling him how much better some other man provides for his family than he does, and how Mr. Jones's wife has a limousine and diamonds, while they have to ride on the street car and use safety pins for ornaments.

Other women contend that the best way to gash a husband with a tongue is to hold forth upon his weaknesses, and to rip him up the back, and slash him crossways about the time he came home after he had made a night with the boys, or the poker game in which he lost $50, or the old friend he lent some money to who never repaid him.

Undoubtedly both of these plans are excellent, but the great majority of wives content themselves with mere superficial tongue pricks, technically known as nagging, about the ten thousand little things of everyday life, and this is probably the best method of all, because it is so thorough and does not leave a single particle of the outside of a husband that has not been sacrificed.

Having reduced the husband to a pulp by soaking him in brine, and having thoroughly pricked him with a sharp tongue, now sear him in a mixture made as follows: Take five gallons of the vinegar of temper, the more acid the better, a quart of the gall of jealousy, a half pound of the paprika of spite, two ounces of the seeds of doubt, and spice it up to taste with suspicion, insinuations and recriminations; throw in enough selfishness to color it all a dark bilious green, and stew the husband in this brew for some 20 or 30 years, at the end of which time he will be found to be as sour as any wife could wish.

Pickled husband is strictly a family dish, though occasionally it is served up for company. Its chief use, however, is as a nightcap for women. Many wives are so addicted to it that they could not go to sleep unless they had partaken of a large slice of it just before they go to bed.

If these directions for making pickled husband are not sufficiently explicit, brides may obtain further information by observing the methods of almost any married woman of their acquaintance.

Lad Goes to War But Soon Tires of Game and Is Willing to Quit

Clarence Shelton, aged 15 years, emulating the example of a real soldier of fortune, came here from Fort Worth, Texas, to go to the front with Villa's army. He reached the background of the fighting which occurred at Bache and in the vicinity of Mesa, but he did not participate in the battles, because he said the rebels would not furnish him arms. Believed of his mind, he had enough of battles and wants to go home to his father, Dave Shelton, of Fort Worth.

According to Clarence, he took French leave of his home last Wednesday. He went to Juarez where he said some general gave him a horse to ride to the front. Six miles out of Juarez, Clarence said the horse was taken away from him by some rebels because he could not speak Spanish, and explain to the soldiers that the mount had been furnished him as a soldier.

Monday afternoon when the fight at Bache started Clarence was near the rebel supply train. He remained there. With some of those in charge of the train, he built a camp fire and sat around it eating while the battle was raging its fiercest. During the full in the battle Clarence went out on a journey to the rear. He said that while he was looking at one, a bullet came along and took off one leg of him.

"Did the bullet sing?" Judge Dan M. Jackson asked the boy. "No, it sort of hissed," the boy replied.

After the bullet took the dead federal's leg off, Clarence said a cannon ball dropped 100 feet distant from him, dug a hole in the ground as deep as a well. He again declared that he was through with the war.

The boy was taken in charge by the police Tuesday afternoon when he returned from the front and was sent to the city hospital. There were three other American boys, whose ages ranged from 15 to 18 years, who went from here to the front with the rebels. These were ordered out of Juarez.

GODSEY GIRL GOES BACK TO CALIFORNIA

"Bill" Caples May Be Sent to School in St. Louis, Mo., on Bond of $1500.

Ellen Godsey, the prosecuting witness in the Caples case, was a passenger on the Southern Pacific passenger train which left El Paso Saturday morning for Los Angeles, Cal. The girl is returning to her home, which she came to El Paso with the Tri-State Amusement company. Recently she appeared as a debutante in a musical comedy playing at a local theater on South El Paso street.

Arrangements, it is stated, are underway to send "Bill" Caples to school in St. Louis, Mo., on a $1500 bond. The case now will be taken to the court of criminal appeals. Should the higher court affirm the sentence of the district court, Caples will have to serve the 60 days the jury gave him on a conviction of aggravated assault, unless governor Colquitt will pardon him.

Caples's attorney told Judge Jackson Tuesday that plans were being considered to send Caples to St. Louis to school, and wanted to know if this would be satisfactory to him. Judge Jackson requested the attorney to notify him in the event the St. Louis trip was decided on.

Ugly Sores Quickly Banished

You Marvel How Worst Skin Eruptions Disappear as Result of Famous Remedy

If you should meet anyone varnishing a sore with greasy ointment, you best advice would be to quit such things and attend to the blood.

To successfully fight any blood trouble, some eruptive skin disease—call it eczema, lupus, psoriasis, malaria, scrofula, or what you will—there is but one sure, safe way to cure it. Ask at any drug store for a $1.00 bottle of S. S. S. and you are then on the road to health. The action of this remarkable remedy is just as direct, just as positive, just as certain in its influence as that the sun rises in the east. It is one of those rare medical forces which act in the blood with the same degree of certainty that is found in all natural tendencies. The manner in which it dominates and controls the mysterious transference of rich, red, pure arterial blood, for the diseased venous blood is impure.

Get through every skin pore acids, germs and other blood impurities are forced in the form of invisible vapor. The lungs breathe it out, the liver is stimulated to consume a great proportion of impurities, the stomach and intestines cease to convey into the blood stream the catarrhal, malarial germs; the bowels, kidneys, bladder and all excretories of the body are marshalled into a fighting force to expel every vestige of eruptive disease.

There is scarcely a community anywhere but what has its living example of wonderful curative effects of S. S. S. Get a bottle of this famous remedy to-day, and if your case is stubborn or peculiar, write to the Swift Specific Co., 215 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Do not permit anyone to talk you into some useless compound they put up as a substitute for S. S. S. No honest druggist will do this.

Here's a test that will prove what you can do with

Cottolene

When frying doughnuts, just fry a few in ordinary lard, and the rest in Cottolene.

You will notice that those fried in Cottolene come to the top first—they come up almost instantly in Cottolene.

Next, when the doughnuts are done, you will notice the dry, tender surface of the Cottolene doughnuts. They are rich and flaky when the others are often soggy and greasy.

You will also be pleased with the delicate, rich coloring of those cooked in Cottolene.
